Literature Crib Sheet. Ethos, Pathos, Logos, Metaphor, Simile, Personification, Alliteration, Onomatopoeia, Hyperbole, Irony, Paradox, Oxymoron, Allusion, Repetition, Pun, Rhetorical Question, Foreshadowing, Anachronism, Dramatic Irony

Only 1 sheet with BOTH sides should be used.

Fate vs Free Will

Cassius refuses to accept Caesar's rising power and deems belief in fate as passivity or cowardice, suggesting humans have power to shape destiny, leading to tragic consequences. Caesar recognises certain events lie beyond human control. Soothsayer's warning and Calphurnia's prophetic dream foreshadows death, suggesting fate's inevitable power. Caesar's refusal to heed them leads to downfall.

1.2 F Beware the ides of March Fate controls lives, destiny is predetermined. Short, direct warning with specific date.

2.2 FDI It seems to me most strange that men should fear; Seeing that death, a necessary end, Will come when it will come. Suggest inevitability of death and immutable fate.

Public vs Private Self

Brutus's soliloquies reveals inner turmoil. Public persona as defender of Rome contrasts private feelings of guilt and uncertainty. Caesar's public image as invulnerable leader contradicted by private moments of weakness and physical frailty. Antony's public grief contrasts with private political manoeuvring, seeking to gain power.

Inflexibility vs Compromise

Brutus and Caesar are stubborn, ultimately suffering fatally. In an aggressive political landscape, one succeeds through adaptability, bargaining and compromise. Brutus's rigid ideals leave him open for manipulation. There seems no way to reconcile firm moral principles with success in politics.

Power and Ambition

Raises questions about consequences of unchecked ambition. While Caesar's ambition leads to death, Brutus and Cassius' ambition to protect republic leads to downfall and civil war. Caesar's refusal to heed warning and assumption of invincibility suggest overreaching ambition. Antony and Octavius' rise to power shows struggle for political dominance.

1.1 MF These growing feathers plucked from Caesar's wing Will make him fly an ordinary pitch Who else would soar above the view of man And keep us all in servile fearfulness "Growing feathers" symbol of supporters and cruel imagery strongly connected to betrayal. Keep him at normal height, prevent him from having vantage point.

Ethics vs Politics

Tension comes from whether Caesar is ethically acceptable. He wins victories and is popular with masses, seeming beyond reproach yet conspirators feel impelled to stop him. Brutus convinces the crowd it was ethically correct, while Antony instantaneously undid Brutus's claims.

2.1 PeIr Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough To mark thy monstrous visage? Honest about dishonesty in deceiving himself about deceit. Conspiracy so grotesque not even darkness can conceal it. Finds conspiracy revolting, subconsciously rebutted own arguments, showing illogical.

2.1 LF And, since the quarrel Will bear no colour for the thing he is, Fashion it thus; that what he is, augmented, Would run to these and these extremities Admits lack of evidence. "May" acknowledges mere speculation, yet determined to justify assignation. Flawed what-if reasoning punishing potential.

2.1 S And therefore think him as a serpent's egg Which, hatch'd, would, as his kind, grow mischievous, And kill him in the shell. Snakes connote evil, represents not only Caesar but power, though now not dangerous, is capable of growing into tyranny. Stoic, ignores knowledge of Caesar's character.

Loyalty and Friendship

Cassius leverages friendship to convince Brutus, but allows him to cause error of judgment. Despite love for Caesar, Brutus chooses loyalty to Rome. Antony's loyalty is steadfast event after Caesar's death, driving desire of revenge.

3.1 Et tu, Brute? Then fall, Caesar. Indicate shock and dejection. Emotional blow of betrayal was deadliest. "Then ..." suggest acceptance of assassination and loss of willpower to fight.

4.3 For mine own part, I shall be glad to learn of noble men. Connotes that Cassius is the last person he would want to learn from as there are more honourable people. Sting for Cassius, as Brutus is akin to a brother to him, and he had ruthlessly lashed out.

Rhetoric and Manipulation

Cassius manipulates Brutus by appealing to sense of honour and forging letters. Antony's funeral speech uses irony and emotional appeals to turn crowd, while outwardly appearing to praise them. Decius persuades Caesar by reinterpreting dream to flatter ego.

3.2 Rh Had you rather Caesar were living and die all slaves, than That Caesar were dead, to live all free men? Contrast "free men" and "slave". But presents opinion as fact, reasoning flawed. False dichotomy making plebeians choose from two options, so they cannot oppose without incriminating themselves.

Brutus

Idealistic to fault, stubborn, strongly principled, ethical

1.2 I love The name of honour more than I fear death. Priorities patriotic duty over self-preservation or self-interest, proves abiding loyalty to Rome.

1.2 Brutus would rather be a villager than to repute himself a son of Rome under these conditions as this time is like to lay upon us. Willing to give up status, nobility, suffer with commoners under oppression. Want to render assistance to free Rome, reinforcing nobility. Places Rome above self.

2.1 MDi Our course will seem too bloody, Caius Cassius, To cut the head off and then hack the limbs, Like wrath in death and envy afterwards; For Antony is but a limb of Caesar: Let us be sacrificers, but not butchers, Caius. Dramatic irony as Cassis's judgement is sound. Brutus sees death as noble cause. "Butchers" suggest vulgar, bloody motive, cynical, pragmatic action for sake of political expediency. Critically underestimates threat, naive to priorities ethics as Antony is crucial catalyst for their failure, insufficient deliberation.

2.1 Ir It must be by his death, and for my part I know no personal cause to spurn at him But for the general. Motivated by public good, shows determination to murder but reluctant to turn against friend. Not for personal gain, benefit Romans. First time we hear Caesar explicitly has to die.

Naive, inflexible, not politically astute, overly trusting

1.2 M Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet, I see, Thy honourable mettle may be wrought From that it is disposed. Brutus's innocent idealism is Achilles' hell, easy to manipulated like blacksmith wrought metals. Intentionally preying on Brutus's ideals and principles. Exploit friendship for personal gains.

2.1 No, not an oath: if not the face of men, The sufferance of our souls, the time's abuse,— If these be motives weak, break off betimes, And every man hence to his idle bed; Speaks with authority, overrides Cassius. Yet oath is politically and psychologically desirable to boost morale.

3.1 FDi Mark Antony, here, take you Caesar's body. You shall not in your funeral speech blame us Idealistic in thinking he would convince crowd in enraged state, believe oratorical skills was enough, and Anthony was their friend.

4.3 shall we now Contaminate our fingers with base bribes, And sell the mighty space of our large honours For so much trash as may be grasped thus? Should not contaminate honour by accepting bride. Values honour, will not tolerate when people betray their own act of honour. Irony that conspirators killed Caesar for own benefit. Idealistic as he has not realised. Wanted to achieve peace and liberty, but there is chaos and more power struggle.

4.3 I did send to you For certain sums of gold, which you denied me; For I can raise no money by vile means; Brutus regards himself as honourable, will not stoop to raise money dishonourable. Hypocrisy, he is willing to use Cassius's money which he knows can from corrupt means. Rather smug wish to stand by principles, begin to hamper war effort. Cassius's willingness to adapt behaviour to circumstance.

Self control, stoic

3.1 Cassius, be constant: Popilius Lena speaks not of our purposes; For, look, he smiles, and Caesar doth not change. Cassius panicking, showing impulsiveness. Despite receiving same news, Brutus surveyed surroundings before coming to conclusion.

4.3 Before the eyes of both our armies here, Which should perceive nothing but love from us, Let us not wrangle: bid them move away; Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs Abrupt interruption and imperatives illustrate he better understand leadership than Cassius, politics, and importance of behaving appropriately before soldiers. Cassius's inability to control puts at risk everything.

4.3 No man bears sorrow better. Portia is dead. Clearly loved Portia, yet able to announce without breaking down into tears, shows his ability to hide and control emotions from others.

Portia

Devoted, loyal, courageous

2.1 Dear my lord, Make me acquitted with your cause of grief Pleading tone, shows sincerity, affection, seeks to understand what is bothering Brutus. Concerned that Brutus's worried, anxious, apprehensive state may take toll on health. Idea of sharing weal and woe shows immense and immeasurable love.

2.1 L By all your vows of love, and that great vow which did incorporate and make use one Strongly believes in sacred bond of marriage and sharing of personal affairs, redlines Brutus he is supposed to share secrets. Bringing idea of vow places more weight as vows are sacred promises.

Stoic, sharp, resolute

2.1 Brutus is wise, and were he not in health he would embrace the means to come by it Immediately knew that Brutus was lying, by outright exposing it, she sends a silent message that lies to evade her will will not work and will be seen through, influencing Brutus to stop lying and tell the truth.

2.1 I grant I am a woman; but withal A woman well-reputed, Cato's daughter. Think you I am no stronger than my sex, Being so father'd and so husbanded? Uses logic to prove trustworthiness. Use relationships with noblemen to demonstrate strength, taking for granted contemporary belief in women's weakness.

2.1 P I have made strong proof of my constancy, Giving myself a voluntary wound Here, in the thigh: can I bear that with patience. And not my husband's secrets? Stabbing causes tremendous agony and excruciating, resort to extreme measures, validates trustworthiness, resilient enough to endure secret. Do whatever it takes to win over trust.

2.1 P Dwell I but in the suburbs Of your good pleasure? If it be no more, Portia is Brutus' harlot, not his wife. Guilt tripping, evoke response. "Suburbs" connote relegation to outskirts, force Brutus to say "no" and have obligation to share secrets, emotional blackmail.

Cassius

Manipulate, cunning, shrewd, jealous, envious

1.2 ElrSH 'tis true, this god did shake; His coward lips did from their colour fly Expressive physical description undermines godlike conception, authority, might, and emasculating him to be no greater than other men or even weaker.

1.2 I have heard, Where many of the best respect in Rome, Except immortal Caesar, speaking of Brutus And groaning underneath this age's yoke, Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes. Flatter Brutus, says greatest leaders and statesmen of Rome think of him as righteous, noble, but unable to see for himself. "Immortal" paints Caesar as powerful, dominant, invulnerable, godly. Causes Brutus to consider is he may be tyrant and stir up urgent need in him due to strong sense of duty for country and being strongly against dictator.

1.2 SP Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world Like a Colossus, and we petty men Walk under his huge legs and peep about To find ourselves dishonourable graves. Powerful mental image. "bestride" and "narrow" create a contrast. "Colossus" and \" petty men" exaggerate power difference, portray him as ambitious and power-hungry. "Peep" conveys fear, caution, and lack of dignity. This evokes pity in Brutus, encouraging him to act due to his honourable nature. Cassius strategically knows Brutus craves honour and suggests that Caesar's tyranny would lead to Brutus losing it, thus prompting him to act.

1.2 Men at some time are masters of their fates: The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, But in ourselves, that we are underlings. Epicurean beliefs motivate him to conspire and change course of history himself than wait for gods to act.

1.2 RQ Brutus and Caesar: what should be in that 'Caesar'? Why should that name be sounded more than yours? Undermines Caesar's authority by reducing status to no greater than Brutus. Repetition, appeals to pride and sense of honour, manipulate into believing he is equally deserving of power. Flattery plants ambition, while disguised as patriotic duty.

1.3 MP Poor man! I know he would not be a wolf, But that he sees the Romans are but sheep: He were no lion, were not Romans hinds. "Poor" connotes pitiful, Cassius's sympathy, insinuate the blame is on Romans. Reassure Casca that Caesar can be defeated. Astuteness, switch strategy for different people: blame Caesar for Brutus, Romans for Casca, appealing to individual ethos, pathos.

1.3 take this paper, And look you lay it in the praetor's chair, Where Brutus may but find it; Devious, conniving, dishonest. Forge fake letter, deliberately lets Brutus see them so he will be inclined to join. Strategic in planning placement as official work chair connotes urgency, read the moment he enters office. Resorts to countless tactics, whether honest or unscrupulous.

Politically astute, pragmatic

1.3 MS O, he sits high in all the people's hearts: And that which would appear offence in us, His countenance, like richest alchemy, Will change to virtue and to worthiness. Use Brutus's respect to turn morally contemptible to justifiable. Brutus's addition appeals to ethos, making it easier for public to accept. Emphasise stark difference when Brutus does not join.

2.1 F A shrewd contriver; and, you know, his means, If he improve them, may well stretch so far As to annoy us all: which to prevent, Let Antony and Caesar fall together. Pragmatically surmises correctly, as later transpires, Antony's astuteness, ought to be to killed to preempt and prevent opposition.

3.1 DI I wish we may: but yet have I a mind That fears him much; and my misgiving still Falls shrewdly to the purpose. Shrewd, instead of that Antony wants to be allies, instinctively aware he should be careful as he killed a close friend and so it is odd he wants to ally with them. Brutus takes Antony at face value.

3.1 I blame you not for praising Caesar so; But what compact mean you to have with us? Already suspicions and paid attention to what he says. When he realised Antony was only praising, immediately interrupted and asked what deal he wants to strike. Wary Antony might trick Brutus into allowing him to attain upper hand.

Resourceful

2.1 But it is doubtful yet, Whether Caesar will come forth to-day, or no; For he is superstitious grown of late Has done research, background work. Observing Caesar closely, sharp, attentive to minor details.

2.1 But what of Cicero? shall we sound him? I think he will stand very strong with us. Actively looking out for potential conspirators, strategic in planning. Attentive to minor details, possess insight, knows Cicero's stand on issue, personal hatred, which Cassius though made him suitable. Possess much foresight in seeing worth in Cicero as a tool.

Caesar

Feeble

1.2 Caesar cried 'Help me, Cassius, or I sink!' Not physically fit or strong he thinks or says he is. No immortal god, has to ask for help from Cassius portrayed as more courageous.

1.2 He hath the falling sickness. Suffers from epilepsy. Person with great authority but physically impaired. Contrast with invincible self Caesar portrays.

2.2 What say the augurers? Undercuts appearance of seemingly stoic fortitude, merely putting on appearance, emphasise inconsistency with selective superstitions.

Conceited, arrogant, excessively proud act superior

1.2 Speak; Caesar is turned to hear. Illiesm, adds grandeur and pompousness. Portrays Caesar as godlike deity. Emphasise sense of pride, arrogance and self-centred nature.

1.2 FDi He is a dreamer, let us leave him; pass Calling him insane, using dismissive, rude, condescending, scornful tone. Presents conceited nature, assumes himself to be all powerful, untouchable, invulnerable, blatantly ignore soothsayer and warning.

1.2 I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd Than what I fear; for always I am Caesar. Arrogant and thinks he is undefeatable. Insists he is impervious to dangers, establish himself as immortal, insusceptible. Worries about Cassius malcontent nature and scheming look, yet thinks of it as insignificant.

2.2 P Cowards die many times before their deaths; The valiant never taste of death but once. Thinks himself as fearless, but foolhardy, hungry for power, crown, make him unnecessarily take risk, cloud his judgement in believing he is superior.

2.2 Caesar shall forth: the things that threaten'd me Ne'er look'd but on my back; when they shall see The face of Caesar, they are vanished. Third person in front of wife shows desire to maintain dignified appearance. Resolute and assertive tone, as if none can change his decision, suggests superiority, imperious position, ego. Adopts dismissive tone to brush Calphurnia off, creates distance between husband and wife, speaks in detached manner, says no one is truly brave enough to go against him.

2.2 S danger knows full well That Caesar is more dangerous than he: We are two lions litter'd in one day, And I the elder and more terrible: And Caesar shall go forth. Illiesm in front of wife, highlighting supercilious, grandiloquent attitude and egotistical nature, desire to maintain dignified appearance. Emphasise invulnerability by challenging notion of danger. Personify "danger" from abstract to tangible to reduce penance. Appears resolute, disregard wife, shows palpable distance. Maintains public persona in private realm.

2.2 How foolish do you fears seem now, Calphurnia! Immediately scolds wife for interpreting dream as bad omen. Mean, does not appreciate concerns, think them valid. Dissuaded even after she spent so much effort convincing him.

3.1 Di But I am constant as the northern star, Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality There is no fellow in the firmament. Boast constancy, commitment to law, imply that he leads Romans, peerless among them. Irony between acting unassailable, permanency, immortality and killed. "Fellow …" grandiose diction emphases exaggerated sense of special. Compares to celestial entity, signifies everyone revolves around him. Does not respect colleagues, thinks he is better.

3.1 S I spurn thee like a cur out of my way Disrespectful and condescending manner to senators. Refer to Cimber as "cur", meaning dog, lowly being who interferes and annoys. "Spur", meaning to hurl him aside. Caesar thinks of Cimber as dispensable and annoying. No regard for senators' pride and emotion, believes he is in position of power to boss and insult.

3.1 HIrAI Hence! wilt thou lift up Olympus? Long speech on how Caesar is not swayed by flattery, ironic since eventual demise is die to susceptibility. Comparison to Olympus compares him to god, showing how highly he thinks of himself, hint at association with celestial things.

3.1 What is now amiss that Caesar and his senate must redress? Egotistical tone, "his" suggest senate belongs to him, connote ownership, assert power, absolute control, superiority.

Easily manipulated

2.2 This dream is all amiss interpreted; It was a vision fair and fortunate Disputes Calpurnia's interpretation, manipulates and distorts dream. Adds tension as without convincing, plan may be foiled, overarching theme of fate. Appeal to vanity, effeminate Caesar. Caesar blithely begins procession to death.

2.2 Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck Reviving blood, and that great men shall press For tinctures, stains, relics and cognizance. Uses flattery, knew Caesar want to become leader, uses Calphurnia's dream to advantage. Make Caesar feel important and needed to perform duty as leader.

2.2 Rh If Caesar hide himself, shall they not whisper 'Lo, Caesar is afraid'? Dramatising reactions os senators, appealing to pride by hurting ego, portrays Caesar as weak ruler with no guts. Scheming, plays to Caesar's weakness of being highly arrogant. Caesar's fickle-mindedness shows in quick change in decisions, prone to manipulation, persuaded by ridicule.

Calphurnia

Good judge of Caesar's character

2.2S You wisdom is consumed in confidence Accurate in analysis of character. Says his ego is excessively inflated and does not think properly before acting.

2.2 Call it my fear that keeps you in the house, and not your own Suggest the he blames on her concern, love for him. Knows full well Caesar is proud and provides reason to not make him seem cowardly to escape sticky situation, knows which excuse suits him best to prevent reputation from tarnish.

Persuasive, superstitious, protective, fearful, caring

2.2 P Let me upon my knee prevail in this Pleads using emotional blackmail, dramatic tactic after previous attempt largely unsuccessful. Exasperated at Caesar's continued defiance and dismissive attitude.

2.2 F When beggars die, there are no comets seen; The heaven themselves blaze forth the death of princes. When Caesar shows prideful nature, Calpurnia warns him not to underestimate supernatural. To add weight, she states that omens are warning from have on to forewarn royals, flattering him through elevation of status, showing understanding of husband and use his messiah complex and sense of self.

2.2 F A lioness hath whelped in the streets; And graves have yawn'd, and yielded up their dead; Fierce fiery warriors fought upon the clouds Threatening and sinter imagery of violence, contribute to ominous tense mood, intensification of grotesque imagery. Tone fearful, pleading stance, point out severity of issue. Foreshadow gruesome potential civil war.

Antony

Brillant, persuasive, popular orator, charismatic

3.2 Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears; Speaks in blank verse. Rule of three. Appeals to friendship first, contrast with Brutus's appeal to Roman identity. Antony appeals to people's hearts, Brutus appeal to facts and logic.

3.2 Rh I thrice presented him a kingly crown, Which he did thrice refuse: was this ambition? Yet Brutus says he was ambitious; And, sure, he is an honourable man. Caesar rejected crown to appear modest to gain support, but Antony uses it as example of humility. Rhetorical question asked in accusatory tone, asserts Caesar was no ambitious and conspirators were misguided. "Brutus …" makes plebeians question Brutus's values.

3.2 P Have patience, gentle friends, I must not read it; It is not meet you know how Caesar loved you. You are not wood, you are not stones, but men; Deliberately dismisses point to draw attention to it, paralipsis, encourage crowd to beg him. Imagery of hardness contrast with "men", juxtaposed with warmth and emotion, depicts Antony as caring in paternalistic way.

3.2 Ir Brutus says he was ambitious, And Brutus is an honourable man Repeat "Brutus" to hammer home connection between him and Caesar's death, sarcastic, contradict Brutus's point on ambition. Question Brutus honour and encourage crowd to do the same.

Unscrupulous, unprincipled, ruthless, cunning

3.2 Now let it work. Mischief, thou art afoot, take thou what course thou wilt. Resort to underhanded means to achieve goals. Let plebeians emotions and feelings brewed from speech guide their action to avenge death.

4.1 These many, then, shall die; their names are prick'd. Casually announce planned political murders, had made prior plans on who he will kill.

4.1 Look, with a spot I damn him. Ruthless, prepared to barter relative's lives for sake of political power. Behaving like mob randomly selecting people to die. Callous tone and attitude, lack of sympathy. Indifferent even towards own blood relation.

4.1 Fetch the will hither, and we shall determine How to cut off some charge in legacies Manipulated funeral crowd with promise that legacies will be distributed according to will. Unsentimental, treacherous character to divert funds illegally to his pockets.

4.1 This is a slight unmeritable man, Meet to be sent on errands: is it fit, The three-fold world divided, he should stand One of the three to share it? Questioning whether Lepidus is worthy of power, subtly suggesting he should take it, displays power struggle, shows ambition to gain more power. "Slight …" suggest underserving of power. Brings up topic after Lepidus leaves, devious and shrewd, no real friendship or close bonds, speak with contempt. Two-faced, eager to dispose of him, wants sole power. "Meet" connotes insignificance, exploitation.

4.1 S He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold, To groan and sweat under the business, Either led or driven, as we point the way; Compare Lepidus to donkey, mere drudge or slave useful for menial tasks, simply a tool or instrument. Shows lack of respect. Derogatory term to put him down. Bad-mouthing.

Shrewd politician

3.1 Say I fear'd Caesar, honour'd him and loved him. Discreetly suggesting his loyalty was partly due to fear, to share common ideas to relate with conspirators, appear to be ally to meet them.

3.1 O, pardon me, thou bleeding piece of earth, That I am meek and gentle with these butchers! Begging forgiveness from Caesar. "Butchers" suggest conspiracy is pure outrage, evil and cold blooded. Referring to Caesar as "earth" places him above himself, elevating power and authority.

3.1 My credit now stands on such slippery ground, That one of two bad ways you must conceit me, Either a coward or a flatterer. Self-deprecating, appears modest, exaggerates faults. Hopes conspirators would let their guard down.

Plebeian

Fickle, forgetful, easily persuaded

1.1 MRh You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things! O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome, Knew you not Pompey? Makes them feel guilty to celebrating Caesar's victory over Pompey, whom they once worship. Describes them as non-living, emotionless, hard-hearted when they switch allegiance. Remind fickle mob about Pompey. Uses insults and demeaning language.

1.1 RhH And do you now put on your best attire? And do you now cull out a holiday? And do you now strew flowers in his way that comes in triumph over Pompey's blood? Exaggerate scale of support to sharpen fecklessness and disloyalty. Shames them by reminding in series of questions forceful through repetition. "Blood" makes powerful impact, vivid imagery creates sense of intensifying anger, provoking reflection.

1.1 They vanish tongue-tied in their guiltiness Plebeians leave without retaliation, easily persuaded, quickly feel guilty, overwhelmed by speech, easily swayed by rhetoric.

3.2 Caesar's better parts Shall be crown'd in Brutus. Lack of logic, though process: Brutus killed Caesar because no one wants a king, yet let Brutus be king. Contradiction in reasoning, emotional and fickle reasoning, inconsistent.

3.2 There's not a nobler man in Rome than Antony. Acknowledge despite Antony merely giving a speech, not long ago their hearts were with Brutus. Simply switch sides, cannot trust plebeians in words, only worship the most powerful.

Violent and senseless in action

3.3 Ir It is no matter, his name's Cinna; pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going. Mob does not care who, right or wrong, but find random reason to justify actions. Not concerned about revenge but engulfed by emotions. Ironic as they want revenge but subject to primal mentality, senseless, killing frenzy, violent, bloodthirsty.

Brutus and Portia

Loving and affectionate relationship

2.1 It is not for your health thus to commit Your weak condition to the raw cold morning. Brutus immediately told her to return to bed due to her delicate constitution upon seeing her. Tone is tender, gentle, contrasting with stoic public self, intimacy.

2.1 But, with an angry wafture of your hand, Gave sign for me to leave you: so I did; Fearing to strengthen that impatience Did not continue of pursue explanation, sensitive, attentive, in touch with Brutus's emotion. Extremely tactful, upon sensing displeasure, stops persuasion, knows no positive outcome would be achieve as Brutus was in agitated state. Loves Brutus so dearly she does not perturb, even is it means not knowing secrets.

2.1 I am not well in health, and that is all. Thoughtful, caring, excuse as manoeuvre to avoid letting Portia worry. Conjuring white lie to reassure her, could not bear to burden her.

2.1 S As dear to me as are the ruddy drops that visit my sad heart. Describe Portia as important as blood flowing from hear to liver. Values her as wife, without which he would not survive.

Calphurnia and Caesar

Distant

2.2 Rh What can be avoided whose end is proposed by the mighty gods? Saying all event, including death are destined, unchangeable. Portrays himself as fearless in font of wife. Shows stoic side, revealing prideful nature even to wife.

2.2 Rh Shall Caesar send a lie? Did not appreciate Calphurnia's interruption, holds a lot of dignity, indignant, annoyance, defensiveness.

Anthony and Caesar

Loyal, trusting friendship

1.2 I shall remember. When Caesar says, 'Do this,' it is performed. Respectful, obey every command.

1.2 Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf, and tell me truly what thou thinks of him Portrays trust, openly admits physical infirmity, values Anthony's opinions as reliable. Consults on private matters, suggest closeness.

3.1 A Thou are the ruins of the noblest man that ever lived in the tide of times Superlative "noblest", ever" suggest high regard and respect. Alliteration "Tide of times" emphasise and exaggerate love, not just his era but whole of history.

Brutus and Caesar

Divided loyalties

2.1 Since Cassius first did whet me against Caesar, I have not slept Inner turmoil, contemplates general good or spare best friend. Unable to sleep soundly, meditative state reflects he takes this seriously and display unwillingness.

2.2 That every like is not the same, O Caesar, the hearts of Brutus earns to think upon Feels sympathy and sorrow for Caesar, criticise him for not being discerning. Exclamation "O …" reveals emotional grief and turmoil, heartbroken.

Brutus and Cassius

4.3 When I spoke that, I was ill-temper'd too. After argument, both apologises, reconcile, and embrace as brothers. Shows loyalty, as after intense argument, immediately forgive. Stark contrast with the Triumvirate.